Pain has a significant impact on physical and emotional well-being in patients with cancer.

Higher pain intensity, pain-related distress, inadequately prescribed analgesics, and negative mood are related to interference with daily life because of pain.

Pain-related distress plays an important role in interference with daily life.